Since 2007, jQuery Conference has been one of the pre-eminent gatherings of front-end developers in the world. Conference attendees are typically JavaScript developers who are passionate about their craft, eager to learn the latest tools and techniques that will help them build modern web applications and form the connections that open doors to new possibilities.

Austin marks the jQuery Foundation's first U.S. conference away from the coasts, and we're expecting a strong contingent of local developers to join those who will travel from across the country and beyond to spend two days immersed in subjects that touch on many aspects of front-end development. Our 20 expert speakers will discuss everything from the newest changes to jQuery itself, to mobile, to building and testing JavaScript applications, and more.

We offer an array of sponsorship options that help us put on a high quality, affordable event for our community, and are happy to be flexible and create a package that will work for your needs.
